THE HISTORY OF OUR PRAYER BOOK

Background

The forms of parish worship in the late medieval church in England, which followed the Latin Roman Rite, varied according to local practice. By far the most common form, or "use", found in Southern England was that of Sarum (Salisbury).

There was no single book; the services that would be provided by the Book of Common Prayer were to be found in the Missal (the Eucharist), the Breviary (daily offices), Manual (the occasional services of baptism, marriage, burial etc.), and Pontifical (services appropriate to a bishop—confirmation, ordination). The chant (plainsong, plainchant) for worship was contained in the Roman Gradual for the Mass, the Antiphoner for the offices, and the Processionale for the litanies.

The Book of Common Prayer has never contained prescribed music or chant; however, John Merbecke produced his Booke of Common Praier noted in 1550 which set what would have been the proper of the Mass (Kyrie, Gloria, Creed, etc.) in the new BCP to simple plain chant inspired by Sarum Use.

Did you notice the new projection screen? The Rev. Melenie Simms, who is now at Bicton Parish, offered it to us for free, as there was a spare one there. Yes please. So Rev. Terry asked David Griffiths if they could go together to Bicton to get it, as David has suitable transport-yes. Once it was here it was put up that afternoon. It's quite a bit higher and much better than the old one. Thank you Melanie, Terry and David- another fine example of what can happen when we work together.

The work of producing a liturgy in the English language was largely done by Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, starting cautiously in the reign of Henry VIII and then more radically under his son Edward VI.

In his early days Cranmer was a conservative humanist: he was an admirer of Erasmus. After 1531, Cranmer's contacts with reformers from continental Europe helped to change his outlook.

The Exhortation and Litany, the earliest English-language service of the Church of England, was the first overt manifestation of his changing views. It was no mere translation from the Latin: its Protestant character is made clear by the drastic reduction of the place of saints, compressing what had been the major part into three petitions. Published in 1544, it borrowed greatly from Martin Luther's Litany and Myles Coverdale's New Testament and was the only service that might be considered to be Protestant to be finished within the lifetime of King Henry VIII
